<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

(Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

(Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently 'fully operational network' and equipment. A 'fully operational network' refers to a 'third party' network providing services to the 'third party's' customers. The term 'third party' refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.

<sup>4</sup> For this entity, "items subject to the EAR" includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(2) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(iv) for related license requirements and license review policy.

<sup>5</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(3) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(v) for related license requirements and license application review policy.

<sup>1</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(e)(1) of the EAR. See § 744.11(a)(2)(i) for related license requirements and license review policy for these items.

<sup>2</sup> Cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure. The following exports, reexports, and transfers (in-country) to Huawei Technologies Co., Ltd. (Huawei) and its non-U.S. affiliates on the Entity List for cybersecurity research and vulnerability disclosure subject to other provisions of the EAR are excluded from the Entity List license requirements: when the disclosure to Huawei and/or to its listed non-U.S. affiliates is limited to information regarding security vulnerabilities in items owned, possessed, or controlled by Huawei or any of its non-U.S. affiliates when related to the process of providing ongoing security research critical to maintaining the integrity and reliability of existing and currently ‘fully operational network’ and equipment. A ‘fully operational network’ refers to a ‘third party’ network providing services to the ‘third party’s’ customers. The term ‘third party’ refers to a party that is not Huawei, one of its listed non-U.S. affiliates, or the exporter, reexporter, or transferor, but rather an organization such as a telecommunications service provider.

<sup>3</sup> For this entity, “items subject to the EAR” includes foreign-produced items that are subject to the EAR under § 734.9(g) of the EAR. See §§ 744.11, 744.21, and 746.8 of the EAR for related license requirements, license review policy, and restrictions on license exceptions.
